DRI LAUNCHES WINDOWS 7 RESOURCE CENTER

Provides helpful information for clients migrating to Windows 7

INDIANAPOLIS, IN – NOVEMBER 6, 2009 - Desktop Resources, Inc. today announced that it has launched its online Windows 7 Resource Center. DRI has been a certified Microsoft Infrastructure Partner for over 12 years, and the Windows 7 Resource Center is the next step in demonstrating support for Microsoft's strategic product direction.

"Windows 7 is an important product for our Windows clients" said Tony Schafer, President and Founder of Desktop Resources, Inc. "Many clients bypassed the upgrade to VISTA, so they are investigating Windows 7 closely, especially since mainstream support for XP ended in April 2009. DRI's Windows 7 Resource Center provides them with easy access to valuable information about Windows 7".

In addition to DRI's Windows 7 Resource Center, the company also plans to add content related to running Windows 7 on Macintosh in the coming weeks.

DRI's Windows 7 Resource Center can be accessed at:
